FULL DETAILS OF THE NEW MERCURY AND MERCURY COMET

Mercury

... now in the Lincoln Continental tradition

For 1965, Mercury assumes a new posture in the medium-price field . . . one inspired by the Lincoln Continental heritage for elegance, interior appointments and road-handling characteristics.

The '65 Mercury is an entirely different automobile. An impressive full-width grille, long sleek profile and a handsome rear deck are the more obvious advancements. This classic, beautifully proportioned car has many others. It's longer and lower with a full 123" wheelbase and a new suspension system for improved ride and comfort. Interiors are luxurious—ranging from crinkle vinyl and rich brocaded cloth to plush leather and vinyl combinations. Total model line-up:

15 in three series—Park Lane, Montclair and Monterey—and the Colony Park and Commuter station wagons. Every Mercury embodies the Lincoln Continental tradition for quality, craftsmanship and engineering. And the '65 Mercury has been recognized as so suitable for all settings, that a number of famous resorts have selected Mercury as their courtesy car for special guests. On the following pages, you'll see many of these resorts.

You'll also see a new kind and class of Mercury.

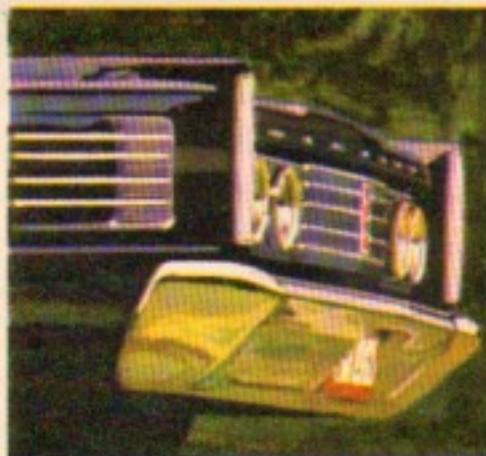

EVERYTHING ABOUT THE 1965 MERCURY REFLECTS THE INSPIRATION OF THE LINCOLN CONTINENTAL

ELEGANT APPEARANCE—The '65 Mercury is beautifully proportioned, classic in line—a car to be admired and envied. A single glance will tell you this is a totally new kind of Mercury. The clean-cut textured grille, gracefully flowing side panels and jewel-like chrome trim blend in perfect harmony to set it apart from the crowd. There are four roof designs to choose from: slimly tapered four-door hardtops, fastback two-door hardtops, limousine-styled conventional sedans and Mercury's exclusive Breezeway Design roof with its retractable rear window. The two convertible models feature a thin-roof hardtop look, a real-glass rear window and an anti-balloonning, perfect-fit top. And when it comes to station wagon glamour, '65 Mercury wagons are in a class by themselves.

LUXURIOUS COMFORT—Your every comfort was a prime concern in designing the '65 Mercury. The wheelbase has been increased to a full 123" and the over-all length has been upped to 218.4" for a more luxurious ride. Trunk capacity is greater than ever, too. With all these comfort gains, the total weight has been reduced for greater economy and performance. Other features sure to find favor with you: a reduced floor tunnel for greater foot and leg room; wider wheel tread, both front and rear, for a more solid, more substantial ride; plus an all-new four torque-box perimeter frame, Cushion Link front suspension, and coil springs at all four wheels which level all roads to turnpike smoothness. And Mercury offers two advanced fresh-air ventilation systems—exclusive Breezeway Design ventilation, and the new Flow-Through ventilation on four-door hardtops.

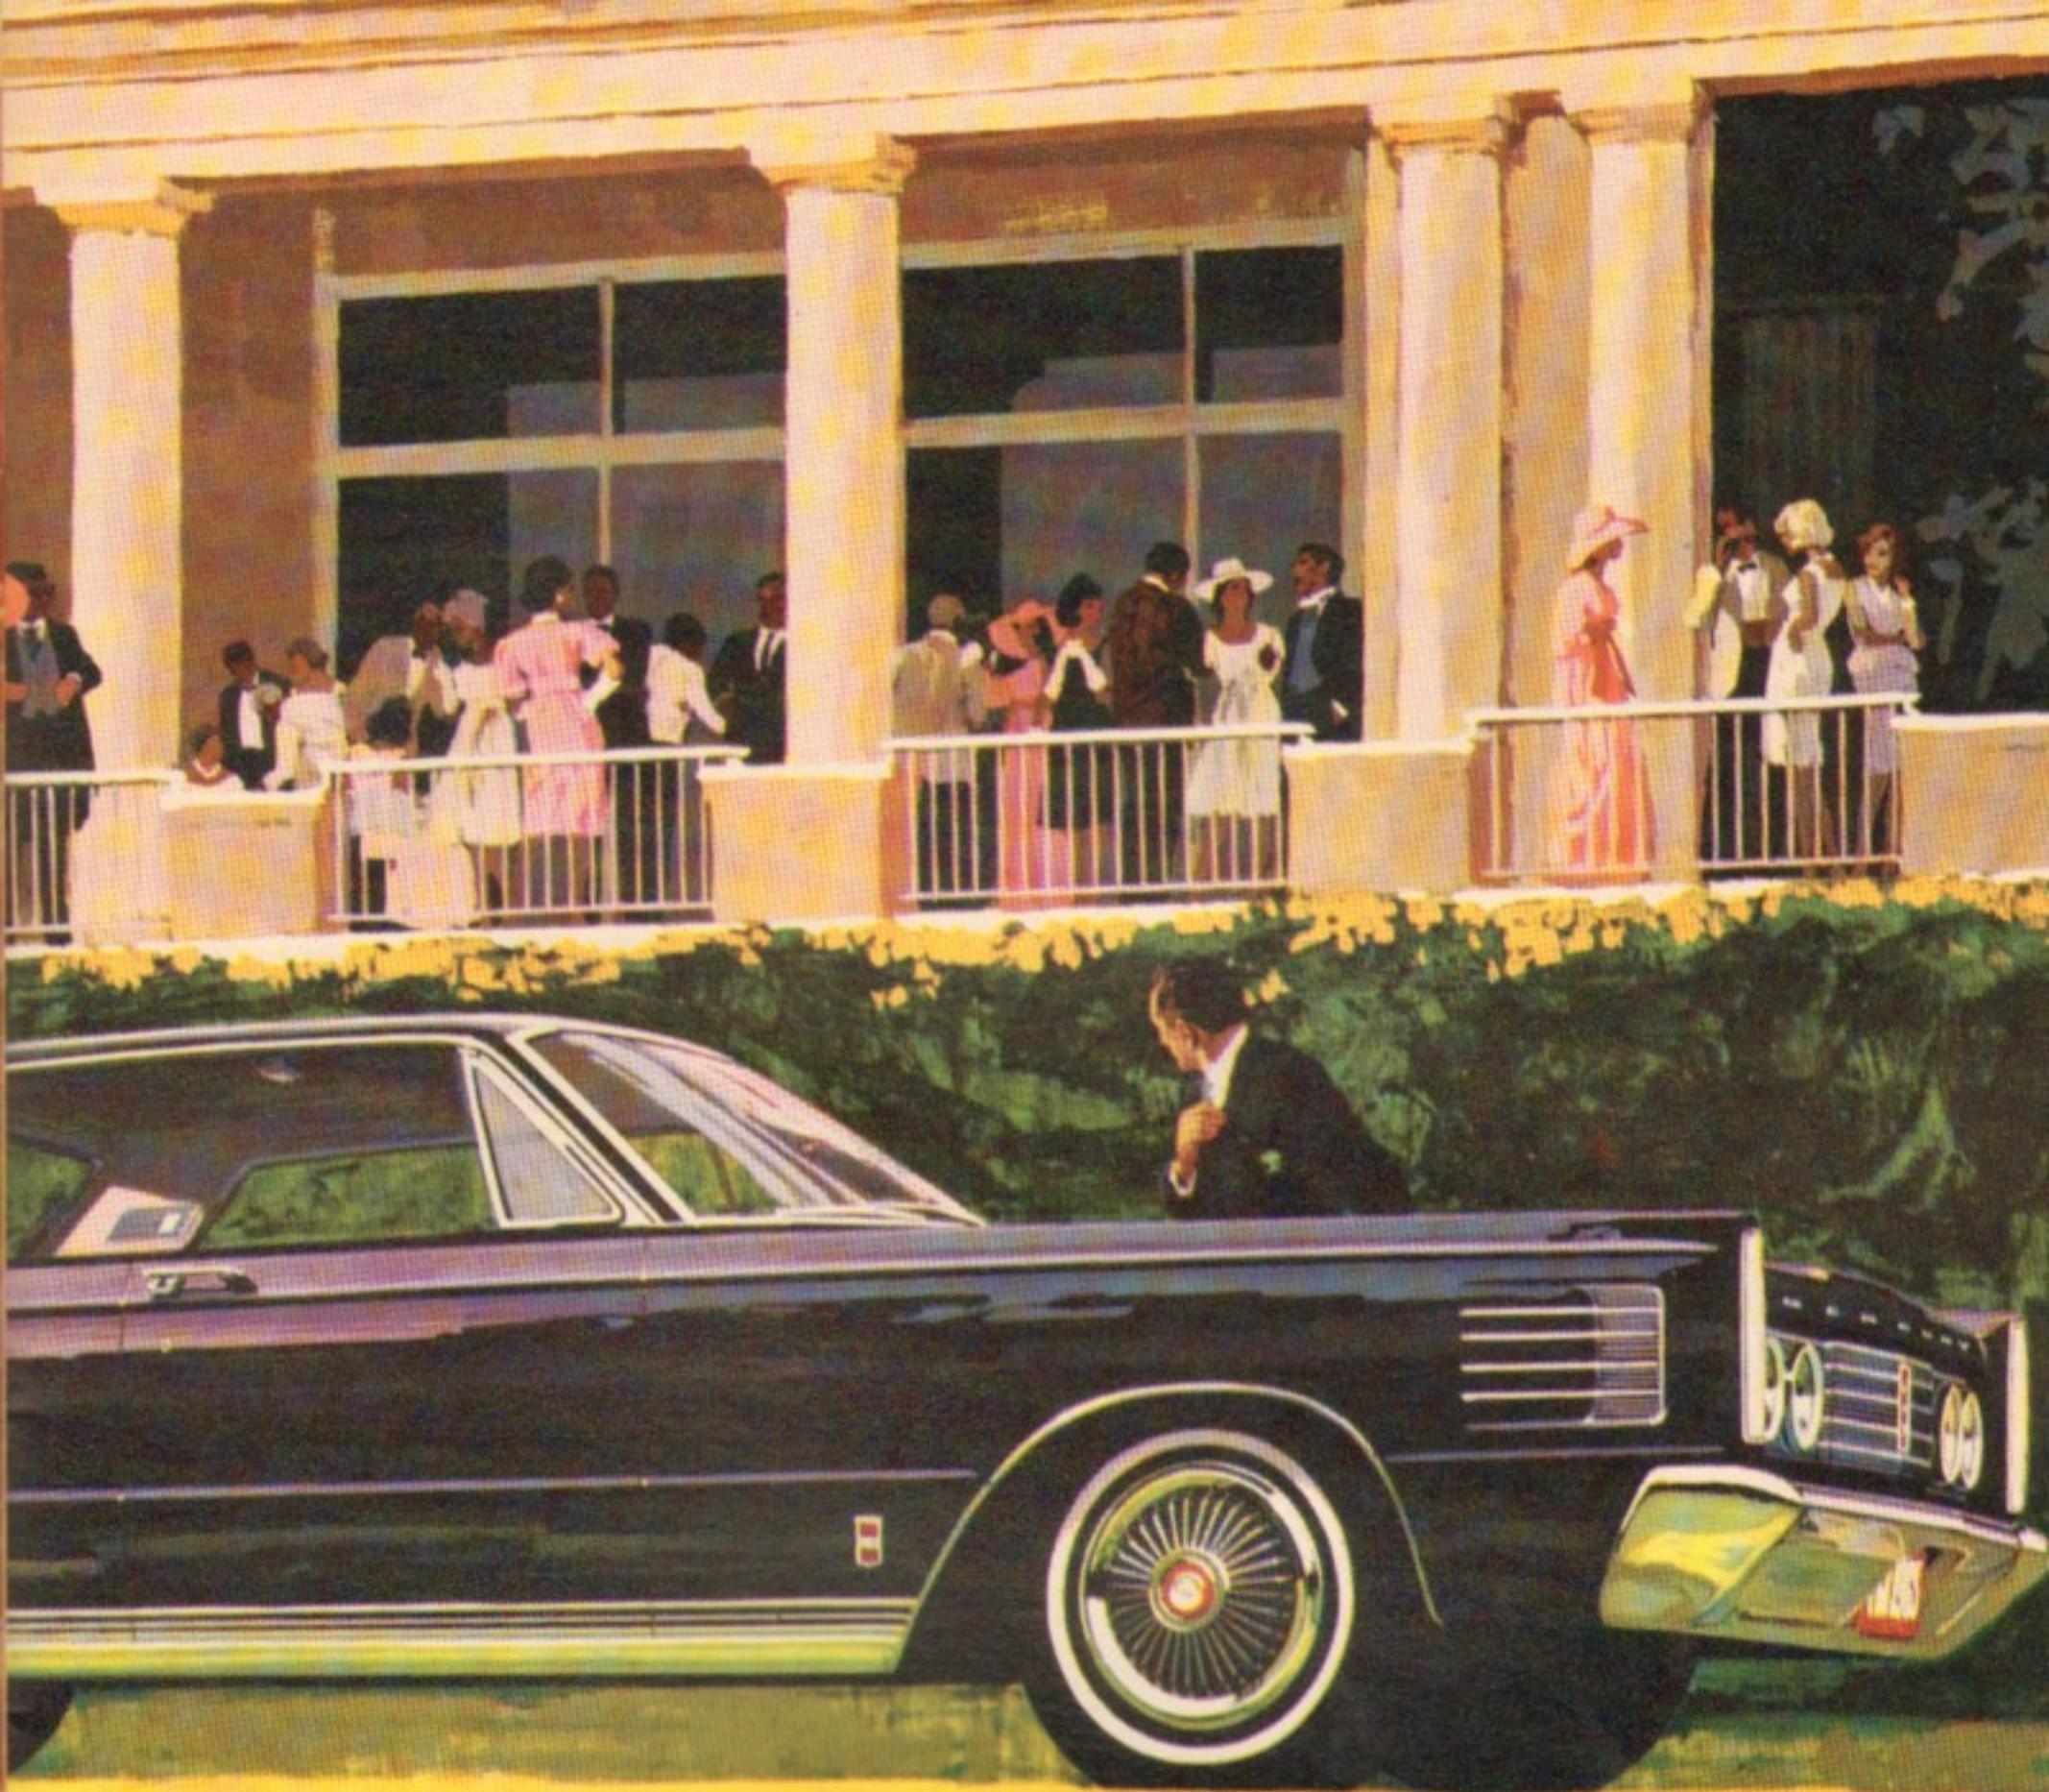

UNUSUAL CONVENiences—It's the total of many little things that add up to the extra enjoyment you'll find in a '65 Mercury. Some of the new items to look for: a reversible key with no upside-down, a suspended "floating" accelerator pedal and keyless door locking. Station wagon owners will find added convenience with the new Channel-Aire system that helps keep the rear window clean. Among the many improved options are power steering, power brakes and the deluxe air conditioner. All told, a total of 24 new or improved options and accessories are available to help you customize your car to match your own individual needs and desires. And don't forget Mercury's reduced maintenance features that cut required service time and expense to a minimum. These are only a few of the things that enhance Mercury's long-standing reputation for fine-car value.

COMMANDING PERFORMANCE—Mercury engines have taken more than their share of honors in performance events against all competition. That's a matter of record. In 1965, all Mercury power plants are ready to extend Mercury's envied reputation as a great road car. One of the reasons is reduced weight that enhances performance and steps-up economy. You'll also get quicker starts and greater passing acceleration. And, due to improved brake drum cooling—better braking. For fully proven power, reliability and durability, there's no better way to travel than in a '65 Mercury.

The Mercury Montclair series proudly takes its position in the popular middle segment of the medium-price class. In the Lincoln Continental tradition, it is smart in style, big in comfort and performance, with a full measure of interior luxury. Three models are available: two-door hardtop, four-door hardtop and a four-door sedan with exclusive Breezeway Design. With the Breezeway roof, there's a power-operated rear window that gives you full-range control of the interior air flow. Since the rear window is protected from the weather, it requires less cleaning to remove ice and frost. If your styling choice runs toward a four-door hardtop (pictured on page 10), you'll enjoy another unique ventilation system—Flow-Through. This system allows a stream of fresh air to flow through the car, expelling smoke and stale air through a rear outlet. Another important thing to remember about the Montclair, as in all Mercurys, is the superb ride. It's due to an entirely new rigidized body construction and four torque-box perimeter frame plus a new suspension system with four coil springs. We call it a compliance-tuned chassis. You'll call it sheer comfort.

MONTEREY

The Mercury Monterey series brings you six ways to indulge your taste for exceptional space and luxury without straining the budget. Any Monterey body style is an ideal "move-up-to" car with real big-car comfort and beauty. Mercury Monterey advantages are many: clean uncluttered styling, a long (123") wheelbase for superior ride, more interior space, larger trunk and the look and liveness of a car that is going places. Step inside and you'll discover a rich-looking interior in either attractive Seville fabric and vinyl or all-vinyl upholstery. Convertible lovers take note: the Monterey convertible, like the Park Lane convertible, features a rakishly inclined rear window and a top that won't balloon when you are on the move. Result? A sleek racy appearance, top up or down. The rear window is tempered glass that folds down neatly without unzipping and resists the scratches that mar conventional plastic windows. Monterey—available in six body styles: two- and four-door hardtops, two- and four-door sedans, four-door Breezeway sedan and convertible.

COLONY PARK FOUR-DOOR STATION WAGON

STATION WAGONS

America's most handsome station wagon—Mercury—is better looking than ever in '68. The Colony Park is Mercury's finest example of how beauty can be built into a wagon. Its outside decor is mahogany-toned paneling blended into a smoothly sculptured side. While inside, Colony Park upholstery has the luxury look of a Montclair. The Commuter is also a styling standout with its commanding profile and tasteful chrome trim. The interior decor is the same high standard of quality you'd expect to find in a Mercury. Both Colony Park and Commuter offer you the added convenience of four-door design, an optional fold-down third seat and a power-operated rear window. And, Channel-Aire, a new Mercury station wagon feature, helps keep the rear window cleaner. Loading space is plentiful: 91.3 cubic feet with a load length of 117.6". And a counterbalanced tailgate opens wide (54.3") for easy stowing of cargo. For taking trips or toting tykes, it's tough to top a Mercury station wagon.
